Comments for Public Posting: I support this, but it's not a solution. There's already parking wars on every street because people are cramming into their over priced rentals. I don't want to live in someone's yard. There's blighted building after blighted building in Los Angeles and the real estate market is obviously and blatantly artificially inflated - foreign investors parking their dirty money in houses, and everything else. Roach infested one bedroom apartment - $$1700 a month. You officials need to grow a spine, and get off your publicly plumped asses. Shame on all of you for letting it get to this absurdity.
