Comments for Public Posting: Someone broke into my car to steal it 18 months ago, causing extensive damage to my vehicle. I have been trying to get a police report for this ever since. Every single time I call the Pacific Division police department, it disconnects the call, and I have tried at least a hundred times. It is doing it today. I tried to ask for a report to be filed online, but it was rejected due to it being a felony. I have spoken to police at the national night out, who were interested but otherwise unhelpful. I have spoken at my neighborhood council meeting, where nothing changed, and spent the entire time reelecting themselves. I have written and spoken to my councilmember Traci Parks office repeatedly, who sent me a link to the police department which was invalid. I have a 21 message communication with Traci Park's office which is no longer responding to me. All I wanted was a police report so I could file a claim. That is the bare minimum. What I really want is to not have people try to steal cars, or at least have police attempt to go after crime in our city. What is the city going to do about the complete ineptitude of the police to respond to crime, and the council's inability or disinterest in resolving the situation for 18 months? I respectfully request a response.
