There are zillions of alternate realities where Halloween was never created in the first place and thus never celebrated by anyone on Earth ever past present future. In those alternate realities, you'd see no trace of Halloween anywhere on Earth ever past present or future. That means in those alternate realities, nobody in California ever celebrates or thinks about Halloween ever past present or future because Halloween doesn't exist in those alternate realities ever.

There are other alternate realities where Halloween is as lightly celebrated and lightly promoted in the United States each year as Purim is lightly done and lightly celebrated in Japan in our current reality. In those alternate realities, you can imagine how barely any trace of Halloween would be found in California ever.

I am dead serious

I will email you and everyone who works at your office this every week for the rest of my life until Halloween events, decorations and trick or treating is banned in LA and its metro. LA has been a hub of brainwashing our country to do that holiday. I will get the ACLU involved if I have to. I am not allowing LA and its metro to do Halloween or St Patricks Day anymore. I will create online petitions for this.
