Michael J. Fox
Biography

Michael J. Fox returned to series television in 1996 with ABC's Spin City, portraying Michael Flaherty, New York's deputy mayor. He won critical praise, garnering three Golden Globe Awards, three Emmy Nominations, and one Emmy Award, a GQ Man-of-the-Year Award (in the TV comedy category), a People's Choice Award, and two SAG Awards. During his time on the show, shot entirely in New York City, Fox did everything from galloping bareback through Central Park, to jumping into the Hudson River. Fox also served as executive producer, along with Gary David Goldberg, Bill Lawrence, and producer/director Andy Cadiff.

Born Michael Andrew Fox to parents William and Phyllis Fox in Edmonton, Alberta, Fox adopted the "J" as homage to legendary character actor Michael J. Pollard. Fox, an "army brat," moved several times during his childhood, along with his parents, brother, and three sisters. The Fox family finally planted roots in Burnaby, B.C. (a suburb of Vancouver), when William retired from the Canadian Armed Forces in 1971.

Like most Canadian kids, Michael J. Fox loved hockey, and dreamed of an NHL career, though he never realistically expected it to happen. In his teens, his interests expanded as he began experimenting with creative writing, art, and played guitar in a succession of rock-and-roll garage bands, before ultimately realizing his affinity for acting.

Fox debuted as a professional actor at 15, co-starring in the CBC sit-com, Leo and Me, with future Tony Award-winner Brent Carver. For the next three years, Fox juggled local theater and TV work, and landed a few roles in American TV movies shooting north-of-the-border.

At 18, Fox ventured to Los Angeles. He struggled through a series of bit parts and CBS' short-lived (yet critically-acclaimed) Alex Haley/Norman Lear series Palmerstown USA, before winning the role of lovable conservative Alex P. Keaton in NBC's enormously popular Family Ties (1982-89). During his seven years on Family Ties, he earned three Emmy Awards and a Golden Globe Award, making him one of America's most prominent young performers.

Spin City reunited Fox with Family Ties creator/executive producer Gary David Goldberg. Together with Bill Lawrence, Goldberg created the series expressly for Fox, establishing it as a joint venture of Dreamworks-SKG, Goldberg's UBU Productions, and Lottery Hill Entertainment (run by Fox and partner Danelle Black). Gary served as co-executive producer with Michael for Spin City's first and second seasons, and Lawrence stepped in during the third. For the fourth seasons Cadiff shared duties with Fox.

Michael J. Fox's other forays into television included a variety of roles and duties. In 1994, he starred in Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water on ABC. He directed Teri Garr and Bruno Kirby in an episode of cable's Tales from the Crypt, and later directed an installment of the critically acclaimed Brooklyn Bridge.

During all of this, Fox also became an international film star, appearing in over a dozen features showcasing his keen ability to shift between comedy and drama. These include the Back to the Future trilogy, The Hard Way, Doc Hollywood, The Secret of My Success, Bright Lights, Big City, Light of Day, Teen Wolf, Casualties of War, Life With Mikey, For Love or Money, The American President, Greedy, The Frighteners, and Mars Attacks!

Fox married Family Ties co-star, actress Tracy Pollan, in 1988. Together, they have four children. Inspired to find projects that his kids would enjoy, Fox lent his voice to a variety of hit children's films in the 1990s. He began as Chance the dog in Disney's Homeward Bound movies. Fox was featured as the lead in Atlantis: The Lost Empire, his first animated Walt Disney feature in Summer 2001.In December 1999 he provided the voice of Stuart Little for the Sony feature of the same name and also provided the voice for its 2nd installment, Stuart Little 2, this past summer 2002.

Though he would not share the news with the public for another seven years, Michael J. Fox was diagnosed with young-onset Parkinson's disease in 1991. Upon disclosing his condition in 1998, he committed himself to the campaign for increased Parkinson's research.

Michael announced his retirement from Spin City in January 2000, months prior to the completion of its fourth season. Expressing pride in the show, its talented cast, writers, and creative team, he explained that new priorities made this the right time to step away from the demands of a weekly series.

Though he maintains a strong commitment to his acting career and running Lottery Hill Entertainment, Fox has shifted a good deal of his focus and energies toward the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research. He hopes the foundation will increase awareness, provide a voice for PD advocacy, and raise much-needed research funding.

Fox whole-heartedly believes that if there is a concentrated effort from the Parkinson's community, our elected representatives in Washington, and (most importantly) the general public, researchers can pinpoint Parkinson's cause and cure by 2010.

Upon its release in April 2002, Michael J Fox's memoir, 'Lucky Man' appeared on the New York Times Best seller list for more than 17weeks.
