BIOGRAPHY

ED O'NEILL

Jay on ABC's "Modern Family"

Ed O'Neill is best known for his role as the main character, Al Bundy, on the FOX Network's long running sitcom, "Married... with Children."

Born in Youngstown, Ohio, O'Neill attended Ohio University in Athens, OH, and Youngstown State University. Signed by the Pittsburgh Steelers, he was cut in training camp and worked a social studies teacher before becoming an actor. He has appeared in a number of movies, including "The Bone Collector," "Little Giants," "Dutch," "Wayne's World" series and several films for Pulitzer Prize-winning screenwriter David Mamet, "The Spanish Prisoner," "Spartan" and the indie film "Redbelt."

Besides his role on "Married... with Children," O'Neill's television credits include the reincarnation of Sgt. Joe Friday on Dick Wolf's remake of "Dragnet," the recurring role of Baker (D-PA), a potential Vice Presidential candidate on the NBC drama "The West Wing, " the role of Detective Michael Mooney on David Milch's CBS series, "Big Apple," and most recently that of a retired cop on HBO's "John from Cincinnati," from the creator/producer of "NYPD Blue" and "Deadwood." O'Neill also had stints on Broadway starring in productions like "Lakeboat" and "Keep Your Pantheon."

Early life

O'Neill was born into an Irish Catholic family in Youngstown, Ohio.[2][3] His mother, Ruth Ann (née Quinlan), was a homemaker and social worker, and his father, Edward Phillip O'Neill, Sr. was a steel mill worker and truck driver.[4] O'Neill attended Ursuline High School and won a football scholarship to Ohio University, where he majored in history. However, O'Neill left Ohio after his sophomore year: he spent more time playing sports and partying than studying and also feuded with his coach. He transferred to Youngstown State University where he was a defensive lineman.[4] O'Neill was signed by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1969 but was cut in training camp.[3][4] Later, on Married... with Children, O'Neill played a former high-school football star who had failed to make it big and constantly reminisced about his "glory days" at Polk High ("I once scored four touchdowns in a single game"). As part of this theme, former Pittsburgh Steelers great and hall of fame quarterback Terry Bradshaw also made two guest appearances on the show. O'Neill was also a social studies teacher at Ursuline High School, before becoming an actor.[4]

Career

O'Neill reenrolled at YSU after being cut by the Steelers and was one of the first students at the school's then new theatre program. He played Lenny in a stage production of John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men at the American Repertory Theater in Cambridge, Massachusetts. In 1985, O'Neill appeared in a Red Lobster commercial eating fish. O'Neill has also appeared in commercials for 1-800-COLLECT and AOL. In 1986 O'Neill was cast in the character of NYPD Police Detective Jimmy "Popeye" Doyle for the planned television series Popeye Doyle, the character originally appearing in the motion picture The French Connection. The two-hour television movie/pilot was filmed and shown on network television. O'Neill received good reviews for his performance, and the movie had good ratings, but the series was not picked up for production.

O'Neill is primarily known for playing the lead role of Al Bundy in Married... with Children, a long-running American sitcom about a dysfunctional family living in Chicago.[4] It was the first primetime television series to air on the Fox Network as a midseason replacement, debuting on April 5, 1987 and concluding June 9, 1997.

During and following the success of Married... with Children, O'Neill appeared in several movies, including The Bone Collector, Little Giants, and Dutch. He also had short cameos in Wayne's World and Wayne's World 2, and appeared as Relish the Troll King in The 10th Kingdom. O'Neill made a brief appearance on the comedy variety show In Living Color, playing the "Dirty Dozens" champion who defeats the challenger, played by Jamie Foxx. He also made a cameo on the sitcom 8 Simple Rules where he was the ex-boyfriend of Cate S. Hennessy (played by Katey Sagal, who portrayed O'Neill's TV wife Peg Bundy on Married with Children).

He had a bit part in Cruising with Al Pacino.

Law & Order franchise creator Dick Wolf cast O'Neill as Sgt. Joe Friday in his 2003 remake of Jack Webb's classic TV crime series Dragnet. The series was canceled by ABC in its second season. O'Neill went on to appear as Governor Eric Baker (D-PA), a recurring character on NBC's The West Wing. Baker, a strong candidate for the Democratic Presidential Nomination, assumed the office of the Vice President under Matt Santos at the end of the series.

O'Neill also played Bill on HBO's television series John From Cincinnati. He currently can be seen on the ABC sitcom Modern Family in the role of Jay Pritchett.

In 2008 O'Neill appeared in an advertisement for then presidential candidate Barack Obama reprising his Al Bundy character. [1]

In January 2009, O'Neill reunited with David Faustino (Bud Bundy from Married with Children) for two episodes of Faustino's show Star-ving.[5] O'Neill also appeared with the entire cast of Married with Children again when they were honored at the 7th Annual TV Land Award show in 2009, presented by Dr. Phil.

Personal life

O'Neill has been married since 1986 to actress Catherine Rusoff, who appeared in two episodes of Married... with Children. In 1989, the couple separated but reconciled in 1993. They have two daughters, one being Sophia born in 1999.

After being introduced to Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu by his friend writer/director John Milius, O'Neill has now trained in the martial art for 17 years under the mentoring of Rorion Gracie whose father Helio Gracie and uncle Carlos Gracie created Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu. In December 2007, O'Neill received his Black Belt in Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu.[6]

He will receive a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame in 2011.[7]
