Comments for Public Posting: Hello! I am a student at Cal State Dominguez Hills and in my opinion, the reduction of oil would be beneficial towards the environment and those living near oil rigs. But if the production of oil was to decrease, then the number of jobs would also decrease, leaving many without a job if they are not guaranteed a new job after working with oil production. It is without a doubt that the reduction of oil production would be beneficial for many, the only downside would be what would happen to the workers if they don't have jobs at the oil factories. Therefore, if these workers are given a just transition to a new job, then the reduction of oil production could possibly be a success for everyone.
