Comments for Public Posting: It's difficult to believe that the City is serious about preserving and creating affordable housing when the City proposes to incentivize people to buy single family houses and convert them to vacation rentals. Why wouldn't the City require houses to be used to house its citizens? Removing single family homes from the prohibition on vacation rentals reduces the rental housing stock and drives up the price of rental housing. This proposal really makes me wonder who the City is working for: it's citizens, or real estate speculators.
