Comments for Public Posting: Living in Hollywood near the walk of fame, I daily see the eyes of tourists walking around go from star struck to jaded, stepping over the homeless to get a photo of stars on the wall of fame. How can a city that celebrates its opulence and is on the cutting edge of technology treat the homeless in this way? I've heard the argument that building or paying for housing is difficult because citizens adopt a "not in my backyard" philosophy. But having done nothing to address the problem it's now in everyone's backyard. On sidewalks near some of the nicest restaurants in town. The cost of treating the homeless with dignity and giving them homes that are safe and sanitary pales in comparison to the income the city would generate if it were cleaner, safer, and got the weakest among us on a path to security. I can't imagine a restaurant or business owner who wouldn't rather have a homeless shelter nearby rather than a homeless encampment and endless tents blocking their entrances. I know dozens who have left Los Angeles because of this one issue. Imagine the income that would be generated from new residents who would return if homelessness was confronted and solved here. Imagine the homeless getting medical care and the sleep they need, jobs cleaning the streets rather than contributing to their dirtiness. Imagine a workforce of formerly homeless adding to the economy rather than depleting it. Imagine spending the billions we sink into a high speed rail that's been promised for thirty years on caring for our fellow human beings and enriching the city at the same time.

Comments for Public Posting: I have been working since the age of 16, in my early 30's i lost my job, car, and housing. Contributed many years and now the only income I get is for my 2 children. In order for me to move foward, My family needs a suitable place to live in but if we have no rights to housing in this situation Im not able to help myself in order to help my family. I have been in the low income and section8 wait list for 7 years roughly and went through the application process and still being denied for many reasons. It is out of my control but my kids need a safe enviroment and live on. Every day I pray God give me the strength to take care of mine and protect my family.

Comments for Public Posting: Every person has a right to dignity and to the support of the community for health and housing. The well-being of the community depends on all who share the space, with equal rights to safety and security, especially in housing. Those who are vulnerable should not be ignored or oppressed. For the public good, provide opportunities for all to share in the benefits of living in permanent housing.

Comments for Public Posting: Simply unacceptable in a civilized country like America; Homelessness is a violation of human rights and social justice and must stop. The judicial systems that promote these social injustices with their frequent irregularities; biases and prejudices, bribery and corruptions, and flawed rulings and judgement must be thoroughly scrutinized for homelessness to stop in the USA, particularly, in the state of California and Los Angeles County. It's a crime to allow and tolerate homelessness. It's a crime to deprive shelter to the American citizens and residents...Million thanks to tireless Councilmember MRT and his team????????

Comments for Public Posting: 6/8/21 To Whom It May Caringly Concern: Yes,A Right to Housing is Growth help for sure. A place to call home aids anyone with being more pro-ductive in society to soar pro professionally and as a volunteer in any community.! I have had some years of experien- ing harmfulness as a very good, neat and well organized renter (as a single female often compelled to watch my back with unlawful entries,etc. Even now renting a Condo, somewhat better, still as a RENTER I have no voice if to address any concern due to prejudice, I believe, in some Sterling Davis,Act (i.e.,codes saying a ren- ter has to ONLY have a voice throu gh an Owner/Landlord? Here a Renter is "left in the dark" and placed in a bad state when an Owner/Landlord truly feels bothered when an HOA rule stipu- lates going through them to voice a concern/complaint of any kind.. even a threatening,male neighbor! Tenaciously I got help from a City Official who got the Lapd to help (after six months of waiting patiently). Other women affected. If I owned a home I'd not have to endure being without a voice to help myself others--left in the dark God Speed. Forever driven,V.C.!
