Comments for Public Posting: Legislators should be able to handle this at the commission/planning level. We do not need another ballot initiative with misleading claims by special interests, whatever position they might take. It would be a colossal waste of money for something that can be handled by elected and appointed officials. My comment is that on its face, this is a bad idea UNLESS you are able to deeply study the issue AND work with local officials (going all the way down to neighborhood councils and land use committees therein) to get input on what a future zoning plan should look like for those specific neighborhoods. You have 99 neighborhood councils who know their areas better than anyone else: USE THEM.
