Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo has been the biggest influence on my life. I've participated in local rodeos for the past 13 years. Due to my years in rodeo, I have gained grit, mental and physical strength, learned how to appreciate wins and more importantly how to handle losses. I understand that many are concerned for the welfare of the rough stock (bulls and bucking broncs). However, the animals working the rodeo events are very well treated. The rough stock are often more famous than the rider. They do their job, which they've been bread and trained for, until the day they are retired and put out to pasture to live out the rest of their days. Consider the alternative for many of the bulls, which would be slaughter after a short amount of life. I ask that people be slow to judge something they do not understand, such as rodeo.

Comments for Public Posting: The bulls in the PBR are incredibly well cared for. From nutrition programs, personal vets and heated and air conditioned barns and trailers, their owners provide them with everything they need. Our country has born and bred cowboys and vaqueros since it began. A cowboy on a bulls back for 8 seconds is akin to a gnat!

Comments for Public Posting: The bull wins more than the rider! These bulls are born and bred to kick butt and they are very well taken care of. Your time is better spent making sure all dogs and cats are spayed and neutered. They are more likely to be treated poorly than these bulls.

Comments for Public Posting: Bull Riding and rodeo's are without a doubt the hardest most personally gratifying sport in existence, the cowboys support each other regardless of the fact that they are in a competition for points because the battle they wage is against the animals of the sport, animals that have zero regards for the cowboys the clock or the outcome of the ride, it is the most manly sport ever devised and to outlaw it would be to outlaw the American way of life. I for one believe that every person should have an right to risk themselves if they choose to in this sport because it is such an American sport that really isn't waged anywhere else in the magnitude that it is here. We cowboys and cowboy enthusiast's are a special breed and I don't think you should try treading on us and our sport because it will be your loss financially not ours we will continue regardless of what you may do just somewhere else.

Comments for Public Posting: I have read with dismay an article that reports the city of Los Angeles, CA will be voting to ban bull riding and all rodeos on the grounds of 800 complaints from animal activists. While I have not read these particular comments, I have read similar comments. Animal activists think these animals are mistreated. Let me enlighten them and you. My parents are ranchers. They have owned their ranch for over 60 years. My dad was raised with livestock. So was I. I can assure the council that any animal that bucks with a rider on it's back, is only doing what that animal does naturally. In fact, horses and bulls buck WITHOUT a rider on their back. As for harming calves when they get roped, that is not an issue. Have any animal activists, or yourselves, ever had to rope a calf to doctor it? Have you every had to hold it down? Have you ever been kicked by that calf? I guarantee those calves are tougher than you think and tougher than you! Do you and the activists realize that rodeo livestock, whether it is the bucking stock or the horses that are ridden in events are cared for extremely well? I wish you could see the children in the area where I live (rural, high poverty area of NM). You would realize that the rodeo stock gets better care than many of the children in my area! Those animals have access to adequate food, doctors, clean areas to sleep, and their living space is not overcrowded. I wish that was the case with the children in my area, but it's not. Rodeo stock is cared for and about! Cows and horses are NOT the same as dogs and cats which is the basis for the anxieties of the animal activists. Yes, I know some animals are abused -but not rodeo stock. They are highly prized, well cared for animals. Please carefully consider my comments before deciding the ban this sport based on false claims. Thank you for your attention in this matter.

Comments for Public Posting: I trust if you do your research you will find that the PBR in no way harms animals. I have bull riders in my fam/friends and fam members who raise the bulls. The bull riders love and respect the bulls. The bulls are raised and cared for as part of the fam. If they were being harmed in any way, owners wouldn't allow their beautiful creatures to participate! Never! It is time to stop the lies and say NO to those who are generating and supporting this false narrative! If not, next they may lie about you.

Comments for Public Posting: 20-1575 - My support for rodeos around the world is know on your pages. There is nothing wrong with rodeo and anyone who says the animals are mistreated have no idea what they are talking about. What a ridiculous topic to even be considering. You want a topic that needs addressed...how about you focus on your homeless AMERICANS instead of animals who are usually pampered and taken care of better. This country is picking the wrong battles while the ones we should be fighting are ignored. This is the sign o ignorance

Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo and and bill riding are a part of a long history of western sports here in the United States and even other countries like Brazil and Canada. This it seems only right to carry on traditions of our heritage. Furthermore, while animal activism is a great responsibility and necessary for the protections of animals all over the globe. However, the interactions between animal activism and the western sports industry has been that of “friendly fire”. The western sports industry cares and covets the well-being of their animals and stock above all else. It is the love and care of the animals that all those in the western sports and lifestyle communities protect most as the animals are at the center of their livelihood. Without love care and respect for the animals, no part of the western life style would be made possible. It is these misunderstanding that we urge other to explore and understand as we all seek to further the efforts of animal activism throughout the globe.

Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo and Bull Riding are great sports that have a rich history in America. The stock contractors treat their life stock very well. The life stock is their livelihood. At the events, as much care is taken for the health and safety of the animals as is for the people. The people fighting to ban these events need to do their research.

Comments for Public Posting: I have been a fan of professional Bull riding for years. The bulls are well taken care of and it continues a way of life that has happened around the America's for a very long time. The sport is truly integrated and international. There is no need to ban it. If you want to ban a sport, ban football. It causes way more damage to the humans that play it than bull riding does to the bull. Thank you for your time.

Comments for Public Posting: I am not sure why l.a. would want to stop rodeo and specifically PBR bull riding, but you would be totally doing a disservice to the athletes involved in the sports...not only the two legged ones, but the four legged ones also...these animals lead better lives than most of the cowboys...they are always treated humanely and they have a job to do just like the cowboys do...do some research on the large stock contractors that furnish the animals for these events and you will find they have excellent facilities for these animals....
