Comments for Public Posting: Leaders have the duty to create and/or present alternatives to livelihoods that no longer conform to the majority's ethical and moral values. Most people, knowing that animals are suffering, will suffer too. We have the same debate with bullfigthing here in Portugal. It is a kind of entertainment for a minority, that still goes on in the name of tradition, and, supposedly, to avoid the extinction of the "fighting" bull (nobody noticed that we almost don't have any oxen, they all die young for food, and we only see few of them in the fields, and a lot of pregnant cows). Anyway, public excutions were also a tradition, and to be an executioner was a profession. They no longer exist, and the world didn't end. We have to help the defenseless animals, it is our moral duty, as it is to help the people who make a living by rodeos, to make the necessary changes in their lifes. Thank you.

Comments for Public Posting: There is no excuse for animal cruelty in any form. I am against the use of bulls in the form of "Fun" in rodeos. It is not fun for the bulls and they are being used against their will. I strongly agree with L.A.'s proposal to ban rodeos in L.A.
