Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo is a part of our history and continues to be extremely important in keeping with our western traditions and way of life. I find it ironic that CA is pushing to exterminate the very thing that played a key role in its development. Please leave rodeo and its related activities alone so it can continue to teach our values to upcoming generations.

Comments for Public Posting: Please stop the attempts to ban rodeo and all of our western events. This is a part of our history, part of our American culture and traditions that have been around for centuries. Rodeo's are competitions, however, more then that they demonstrate to the public the basic work that is done on ranches around the country. When livestock is purchased for six figure amounts, why would anyone want to abuse such a valuable animal. Myths are spouted by those who simply don't like animals and want to end what has been part of America since man first sat on the back of a horse. This is anti-rodeo sentiment is simply discrimination to ranchers, their livelihood, for many, generations and generation of raising livestock, competition with it, breeding quality horses and bulls. Our country is not just composed of those who live in cities, perhaps enjoying city parks, rather ranchers, farmers, who live with their livestock on open lands, raising the food we eat and the livestock they work with side by side. Please reconsider banning which has been part of America, the Western Way of life is the very first way of list that existed in America, why choose to destroy it. Ann Lettis

Comments for Public Posting: Rodeos do not harm livestock in any shape or form. Yes, accidents happen, but accidents happen everywhere. Rodeos should continue for the well being of cowboys and livestock alike. If we get rid of rodeos broncs, steers, bulls, sheep, will loose their purpose just like how cowboys and cowgirls will loose their livelihood.

Every lie and mistruth given in opposition to these events have been proven wrong, it's time to stop bowing down and caving into these ridiculous agendas of the animal rights activists. Comments for Public Posting: The people trying to ban rodeo have no idea what they are talking about. Stock contractors and participants go out of their way to protect the livestock. This is a sport that developed from the ranching work that was so important to the settling of the west. If there are some bad actors, there are laws that can be used to take care of them. Banning an entire sport that has tens of thousands of participants and is enjoyed by millions of people for possible acts of a few is ridiculous.

Comments for Public Posting: I am writing in support of Rodeo. A popular sport across the United States that showcases the athletic ability of people and animals. I understand that animal rights groups would like to stop rodeo events however they do not have the knowledge base to back up their claims of any mistreating of the animals. The horses and bulls are bred and trained for the events that they are showcased in and receive the utmost care. The animals represent a huge investment by the competitors and contractors and therefore it only makes sense that they are given the best care. I have first hand experience the time and money that goes into caring for rodeo stock and there is no question that the owners of the animals take pride in the health and wellness of each individual animal.

Rodeo events highlight much of the work people had to do to survive and create the beautiful state you enjoy today. They worked with horses, cattle, and became experts in their fields. Comments for Public Posting: I am AGAINST the ordinance banning rodeo. City residents are so disconnected from animals and anything somewhat rural that going to a rodeo may be the only time to interact personally with large animals and livestock. Rodeo competitors, producers, and sponsors love their animals and not allowing the general public to see that human-animal empathetic interaction ensures that only one side of life - city - can ever be experienced. In addition, if you want an economic reason to not ban rodeo, you need to understand that just the horse industry is billions of dollars in the U.S., let alone adding in other livestock showing. Ban it, and your community loses money.

Comments for Public Posting: Please keep rodeo alive in L.A., because if it is banned there it will initiate bans in other cities. The animal rights crowd is a very, very small minority of the American population. Their goal is to eventually eliminate ALL forms of human/animal interaction. They go after what they perceive to be easy targets first to set precedents. Today it is rodeo, tomorrow it will be dressage or trail riding. Again, please DO NOT ban rodeo, and help keep our western heritage alive.

Comments for Public Posting: Our family is speaking out against the, inherent, animal abuse in rodeos! Our family supports the "Los Angeles Rodeo Ban"! There is no excuse for animal cruelty or the exploitation of animals for, human, entertainment! The, rodeo, industry pretends that the animals do not suffer, but, according to a "Twitter" feed by "Los Angeles Times", reporter, Susanne Rust, the animals, routinely, suffer fractures, snapped, spines, and, crushed, skulls, and, the rodeo lies about it. In December 2023, the "Los Angeles City Council voted "YES", UNANIMOUSLY, to ban rodeos. Unfortunately, the ban is not in place, yet, because we are waiting for language to be amended in Committee. While the "City Council" drags their feet, the animals continue to suffer.

Comments for Public Posting: PETA needs to back off and get back to their roots - you know, helping animals that need help. They need to put their resources towards real abuse and neglect cases instead of going after rodeo's. Rodeo competitors take excellent care of their stock and horses, for the most part. There are always a few bad apples but name me one event, human or animal that doesn't! PETA lost all credibility as far as I'm concerned when they were discovered getting animals under the pretense of finding homes when instead they were killing them and disposing of them in various dumpsters. Or my favorite, going to Alaska to protest and try to shut down fishing. Research it, it's a matter of public records. They think no one should have an animal of any kind. Animals should not be raised to feed us, help us in our work or to simply enjoy animal companionship. PETA has gotten so far off course in their original goals that I consider them to be extremist of the worst kind. They play on the heart strings of people who genuinely care about animal welfare and do them a disservice. Don't allow them to win this fight in LA for it will only spread like a virus to other cities and States. SPEAK UP PEOPLE!!!

Comments for Public Posting: Please get all the facts from both sides for this important vote. Most of the animals in rodeo and other horse related events are better cared for than people know. There is so much mis-information about how the animals and the equipment are used. I would ask that you would seek the truth and the why. Also, please evaluate the impact on the economy as well as kids lives who learn so much from being responsible for these animals. You may believe kids are not part of this vote but your decision could impact so many kids and their futures. Rodeo, horses and related events are part of our history. Comments for Public Posting: As a past resident of LA County I grew up going to Rodeos, County fairs and lived primarily in farm towns, just because LA has changed does not mean that Agricultural events such as Rodeos have to stop. The history of LA is in its past and its future and by wanting to do away with western events your limiting the history of the area. As a young girl my grandfather took me to a rodeo at the Forum it was a spectacular event Cotton Rosser was the greatest showman horseback and from that moment forward I was hooked on Rodeo. Stop trying to erase history because “it's not your thing” the revenue alone could benefit the youth coming up. Stop thinking and start listening to the people who support western events they too have a say. I sure hope your council reads every letter, post and email so they learn that history has a place today, western events are part of America and LA. Signed a past angelino.

Comments for Public Posting: Rodeo is not just an event. It's also a lifestyle. Kids dream about being a cowboy or cowgirl. Rodeo supports many jobs.

Comments for Public Posting: Traditions in rodeo and the cowboy lifestyle have been carried on across the county for generations. Many people have someone in their family that have some tie in some way to the cowboy lifestyle or rodeo. It is one of Americas oldest traditions. To ban rodeo shows you no longer care about traditions, generations, or the Cowboy lifestyle. Cowboy and Cowgirls are the most hard working, well respected people you could have in your city. The care for their animals is above and beyond what most people do on their “pets”. These animals are athletes, with the best care in the world, literally. Most have better care that the people who ride them. Animal activists are never happy. They believe horses belong in the wild, free. When in fact, our horses would die in the wild. The thing is, animal activists have never been around animals, just what they see online or read in a book. Until you’re around animals, be hands on and truly understand them, anything is easy to believe. So, before you vote to ban rodeo, come see a few, have hands on experience, meet the people involved, get to see the animals.

Comments for Public Posting: Only an extremist government would come in and ban something that our country was founded and quite literally built upon - man's bond with his horse is a human right by nature as we have always worked side by side from the fields to feed the first settlers, to haul the steel that built the earliest remnants of modern LA itself. Cowboys were the back bone on which this country was built upon. To make it to California as a settler was to signify the ultimate reach of freedom from the shackles Europe's crowns. The cowboy way and way of life paved the street for the metropolis to thrive. Without cowboys, horses, farmers and the tribute of rodeo, which is the only recreation allotted to a man who works for his country horseback, we would not have LA. What is cannot be, without what had been. Let history keep this rich display of some of the greatest men, equine athletes and innate Americans this world has ever seen.
