Comments for Public Posting: Bull-riding is cruel to the traumatized bulls. It is also dangerous for the riders and often for the spectators as the terrified bulls have sometimes been able to break through barriers and injure those watching. Los Angeles authorities would be wise to ban bull-riding.

Comments for Public Posting: I am writing to protest the bull riding competition --- this is clearly animal abuse --- and there is simply NO excuse for it. Both parties need to have equal desire to participate in an event - and the bulls clearly do not. In a world that is so cruel as ours is -- why contribute to more? If you want to fight someone - pick on someone who wants to participate on an equal basis.

Comments for Public Posting: To abuse and torture animals is a pathetic statement of humanity. It's impossible to reconcile the utterly useless cruelty. It's impossible to believe that anyone thinks animals are not abused during a rodeo or that the animals somehow enjoys this treatment. Please put an end to rodeos. Life is hard enough

Comments for Public Posting: Bull riding is an example of cruelty to animals, as are all rodeo events. Subjecting bulls to fear and pain for so-called "entertainment" purposes is unacceptable. We would not allow cats and dogs to be subjected to such treatment, why bulls? Those participating in the rodeo events, such as bull riding, have no regard for the harm they are inflicting on sentient beings. And by exposing rodeo audiences to such cruelty, they harden the hearts of others. I cringe when I think of impressionable children, who have a natural empathy for animals, being exposed to such cruelty as "entertainment." This is abuse, pure and simple. As a former L.A. resident, and as a compassionate human being, I support the L.A. Rodeo Ban. I hope you do, too.
