Comments for Public Posting: As a local resident who cares deeply about climate change and public health, I strongly support item 3, Motion from Council members Raman and O'Farrell that will require all new residential and commercial buildings in Los Angeles to be built so that they will achieve zero-carbon emissions. Decarbonizing our buildings is one of the most impactful things we can do in Los Angeles to reduce carbon emissions, and thus climate change. Plus, electrified buildings have better indoor air quality and are healthier for the people who live in them, especially children. As a mom of a newborn baby and a kindergartener, I care a lot about the air my kids breathe and the health of our planet. Our inaction today reduces their chance of a healthy future, dramatically. I urge the Council to support a strong local policy that limits exemptions and prioritizes implementation by January 1, 2023. Alyssa Bell, Los Angeles

Comments for Public Posting: I am a local resident who feels that climate change and public health are our most pressing issues. As such, I strongly support item 3, Motion from Council members Raman and O'Farrell that will require all new residential and commercial buildings in Los Angeles to be built so that they will achieve zero-carbon emissions. I have recently been learning more and more about how decarbonizing our buildings is one of the most impactful things we can do in Los Angeles to reduce carbon emissions, and thus climate change. There is now ample evidence of the health effects of gas stoves. Decarbonizing buildings by electrifying them can lead to better indoor air quality. I am a father of two. I care about my children's lungs and the future of the planet they will live on. I care about this deeply for everyone else's children as well. I urge the Council to support a strong local policy that limits exemptions and prioritizes implementation by January 1, 2023. Thank you for your service to the community, Andrew Reich, resident of Windsor Square

Comments for Public Posting: Please approve bill that mandates any new buildings to have zero carbon emissions, and any other climate sensitive improvements going forward. I recommend all houses have no gas as well, and less water usage , as well as native plants .
