Comments for Public Posting: In the 1880's our relatives traveled by oxcart with great difficulty across the country to settle in a place of hope and prosperity and to start a new life. People thronged to get here - the Golden State. And look where we are now. People fleeing this place. Los Angeles is no longer a dream for many - it has become a nightmare for those who live here. You are 15 people who can turn things around. This vaccination Mandate is so counter productive, that I can't believe it was even considered, let alone passed. The economics of it alone should be obvious. Once again, small businesses will be hit by cutting back their number of customers and some places will have to close. These hard working people are barely climbing back up to where they were before the virus started and now being hit again by an illogical decision. People will shop in other cities and LA will lose that sales tax. Companies are leaving the state. Having 2 classes of citizens - the vaccinated and the non-vaccinated - is NOT what America is about. The rally cry was herd immunity, herd immunity. And, once we got there, the percentage was continually upped . Firing those who got us through the past year or so is a slap in the face to them. We need to keep everyone employed and safe. Please reconsider this Vaccine Mandate and the repercussions it will cause. The rest of the country is doing just fine without it. Let's concentrate on cleaning up and rebuilding this great city to where it once was.
