Comments for Public Posting: The Pacific Dining Car has been an example of fine dining in the city of Los Angeles for over 100 years. Providing a respite for Angelenos and world travelers while remarkably being a 24 hour establishment nestled right by Good Samaritan Hospital, this stalwart of dining must be preserved because it is what is right about Los Angeles. So, I implore you as all well as throngs of others, please preserve this beacon for generations to come.

Comments for Public Posting: I have lived in Los Angeles for my entire life. And put simply, there never has been, nor will there ever be, an establishment like the Pacific Dining Car. Where else could you go for a meal that was every bit as elegant and memorable at 1 a.m. as it was at 1 p.m.? Where else could a cross-section of businessmen and politicians rub elbows with Russian gangsters and local authors? Where else was the juxtaposition of exterior sketchiness and interior coziness so pronounced? We've all lost so much in the past few years. Please allow one of our city's true institutions to come back to life.

With classics like the Brown Derby dead and gone this is a Historical Landmark that's been around for a Century and it should be saved. What would happen if we got rid of all of LA's historical sites and everything was new and clean. It would be a beautiful city with no soul. This is a landmark worth saving.

Comments for Public Posting: Pacific Dining Car was a unique institution in Los Angeles. Very few cities, even Los Angeles, had a really good 24-hour restaurant. 40 years ago, when I was a young attorney, and needed a good restaurant for power meetings, Pacific Dining Car was my choice. That tradition continued over the time since then. More importantly, five years ago, when I had the unique pleasure of having my son come to work for me, as a young attorney, we made it a tradition to have dinner at Pacific Dining Car during every trial. Even as "new" customers we had our regular table, our regular waiter and a feeling of "being home" that you just don't get at many other dining spots. I am not an expert on historic designation, but I am a fan of Los Angeles and I am in favor of preserving some of the sites which, as a native of Southern California, have formed some of my happy memories.

With increasing frequency, rapacious developers are destroying the historic, cultural, and social fabric of our City—just to put up more national chain stores with no character or community ties. Comments for Public Posting: Please save Pacific Dining Car The restaurant has a plethora of historic importance and meaning to locals such as myself and so many others which in turn creates revenue for the city from visitors. Visitors flock to Los Angeles to see our rich history. By allowing it to disappear and be replaced by cracker box housing and such that isn't even remotely sustainable is heartbreaking and in the end doing a grave disservice to the future of our city, the residents and visitors. When places of historic importance are lost due to negligence or greed, they cannot come back. Think about that. When you tear down places like the Garden of Allah, and replace them with hideous strip malls or flimsy housing, they become dilapidated monstrosities awaiting another tear down in the same cycle leaving an empty dirt lot for who knows how long while red tape and bureaucracy ensues. When we look back, who doesn't wish that these mythical well made places were instead preserved? What further value was stolen by these losses? And what further value will be stolen if you don't make a decision right now to stand for what you know is best for the future? The best time to plant an oak tree was 20 years ago. The second best time to plant one is now. And it is never a good time to destroy one that was planted over 100 years ago. The Pacific Dining Car is a remarkable gem that should be restored and preserved and not lost like so many other icons in our very rare and unique city.
Thank you

Comments for Public Posting: I moved to LA 40 years ago. PDC has been a part of my tradition ever since then. We had our celebratory lunch there after I was sworn in as a lawyer. We've had birthday celebrations there and have gone there just because we love it. My husband's family has been in LA since the 1930s. His grandparents used to dress up and go there all the time. Then they took their kids (one of whom was my husband's mother) and then their grandkids (my husband and his sister). We carried on that tradition with our children. PDC is an integral part of the patchwork that makes LA. There is so little real history in this city and to disregard the supreme importance of the history of PDC to this city would be shameful and sad and just not right. And let's not forget the food which is (was:()) some of the absolute best in the city. Their steaks rivaled the best in the world, their baked potatoes (fully loaded!) were incredible and so was everything else. And there is no restaurant atmosphere like it in the world. So please do whatever you can to preserve this jewel in the crown of our history. It matters.

Comments for Public Posting: The PDC is probably my favorite restaurant on the globe both based on the food, and the atmosphere it provides. I visit LA often and it's my first choice for a meal when I am in town. My work often takes my colleagues and I into late nights, and there is nothing like a fine dining establishment open at 1am to sit down and have a good meal before bed and unwinding at the Pacific Dining car. Our favorite tables are always in the bar room and hanging and talking to Raphael behind teh bar while we wait is always a pleasure. Please bring back our beloved PDC--pizza and street food just don't cut it. It's an institution and LA is a better place when it's there for everyone to enjoy!

The Pacific Dining Car is a city treasure. It is one of the iconic landmarks that I remember from when I first moved to Los Angeles 50 years ago. It's presence gives us a view into a long ago Era that reminds us of LA's former charm, unique personality, rich tapestry and history. The Dining Car should be protected and restored so the LA can maintain its unique history.

Comments for Public Posting: PACIFIC DINING CAR MUST BE SAVED! Los Angeles must preserve this restaurant which has been ingrained in generations of Angelenos. I cannot overstate how important this gathering place is for the thousands of regular visitors that have flocked here for dinners, celebrations and some times for remembrances. This is a very special sacred space and it must be preserved for current and future Angelenos PLEASE HELP! THANK YOU

Comments for Public Posting: Mrs. Hernandez please take into consideration that this is a community jewel. It sits in an iconic corner of town and it defines history from our city. I will appreciate your support to bring it back the Pacific Dinning Cart doesn't seem like it is a big deal but just imagine there dining room filled with families on Christmas eve. I'm Latina and have the tradition to celebrate with Family at home but the one time I came in just to have an early dinner with my cousin we couldn't believe all the memories being made that day. The place was filled and it was booked the rest of the night. Also the staff is super friendly and welcoming it is definitely missed. Thanks for your time and consideration.

Comments for Public Posting: Councilmember Hernandez : I live in your district and was thrilled you were elected. Please consider saving the Pacific Dining Car. Since I moved to LA in 1981, it has been a favored spot for me, my family and friends. There is so much history in there and it represents a piece of LA life. When I was first starting my professional practice, I used it as my "office" when I was working from home but needed to do meetings. I had many a breakfast meeting there.
