This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Ackley Padilla on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Lisa Hansen on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Karo Torossian on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Matt Hale on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Debby Kim on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Andrea Conant on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member John Lee on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Michelle Steiner to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Peter Kolla to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Scott Mills to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Marko to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Dean Yamashita to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from shashi poudyal to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Kara Bartelt to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from javier cano to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Amy Ram to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from John Patel to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Ackley Padilla on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Lisa Hansen on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Karo Torossian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Matt Hale on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Debby Kim on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Andrea Conant on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member John Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mike patel to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Liz Saldivar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to David Hersch on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Dennis Gleason on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Jenny Chavez on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Jeanne Min on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Hannah Lee on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Chad Molnar on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Rachel Brashier on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Solomon Rivera on Jun 15, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from irit winter to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Benjamin Hausler to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinnam to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinnam to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Jeff Zarrinam to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Richard Glenn to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Liz Sheldon to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Alicia Hawkins to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from AJ Patel to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Nash Shah to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Fred DeSota to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Damien Hirsch to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from john beccaria to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Liz Saldivar on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to David Hersch on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Dennis Gleason on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jenny Chavez on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jeanne Min on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Hannah Lee on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Chad Molnar on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Rachel Brashier on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Solomon Rivera on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Ackley Padilla on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Lisa Hansen on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Karo Torossian on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Matt Hale on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Debby Kim on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Andrea Conant on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member John Lee on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 16, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 16, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We therefore ask that the council let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mercedes Simonian to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Surashbhai Patel to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Beccaria to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022

--

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Herb Wesson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Gilbert Cedillo on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Marisa Alcaraz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Liz Saldivar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to David Hersch on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Dennis Gleason on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Jenny Chavez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Jeanne Min on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Hannah Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Chad Molnar on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Rachel Brashier on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Solomon Rivera on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Ackley Padilla on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Lisa Hansen on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Karo Torossian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Matt Hale on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Debby Kim on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Jennifer Barraza on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Andrea Conant on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Curren Price on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Joe Buscaino on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Monica Rodriguez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Kevin de Leon on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Nithya Raman on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member John Lee on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Paul Krekorian on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Marqueece Harris-Dawson on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Paul Koretz on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Mitch O'Farrell on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Mike Bonin on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Nury Martinez on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.

-- Sent from Mark Davis to Council Member Bob Blumenfield on Jun 14, 2022 --

Dear [@legislatorTitle] [@legislatorLast],

Dear City Council Members:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the "Workplace Security, Workload, Wage, and Retention Measures for Hotel Workers" ordinance.

We all want to protect hotel employee; in fact, we support the employee safety elements of the proposal, including panic buttons. However, this ordinance includes many other elements that are unworkable. We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot.

We oppose the measure for the following reasons:

This measure increases water consumption during an unprecedented drought: Angelenos have been asked to reduce their water consumption by 35 percent in light of severe drought conditions. This measure deeply undermines this goal. Mandatory daily room cleaning would increase the use of water, as well as electricity and gas in perpetuity. It also would impose daily room cleaning on guests who prefer to opt out for environmental or other reasons.

This measure would prevent employees from earning additional income: We believe one job should be enough. In cities where square-footage limits have been mandated, employees lose hours as hotels comply with the law, forcing employees to seek additional work elsewhere. At a time where hotels are struggling to fully staff our operations, this would result in further staff shortages, reduced rooms available for guests, and will triple the cost of housekeeping for many small "mom and pop" businesses -- making hotels in Los Angeles less competitive and less affordable for the average family.

This measure would reduce the City's vital TOT revenue: The City has not conducted an economic analysis of how the measure would reduce Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) revenue to the City's General Fund. An ordinance with this much economic constraint has not been proposed in any other city. Los Angeles's hospitality jobs and economy are struggling to recover from the pandemic, and this ordinance will hurt the industry's ability to rebound and reduce TOT revenue that fund critical city services.

Despite its stated goal of protecting employees, this measure is deeply harmful to our employees, to the hotel industry, and ultimately, to the entire City.

We, therefore, ask that the council to let the voters decide - Send it to the ballot. If members are not willing to do so, we encourage the council to referend this measure to the voters. Thank you for your consideration.