Comments for Public Posting: Under the proposed motion, what happens when a Los Angeles resident wishes to buy indoor plants for use and they are not native plants? There are many indoor potted plants that are used for interior decoration and to "green" a home, office or commercial setting. It is unclear as to whether this measure would make it very difficult to procure such plants as they might be construed to be landscaping plants. Many indoor potted plants are also considered to be outdoor shade landscape plants. It would seem that the City needs to address this or otherwise risk the loss of availability of plants that provide great assets in our daily indoor environments.
