Comments for Public Posting: This project should not be jeopardized. LA is overdue for improvements to make its streets safer. Deaths of pedestrians, especially children, and cyclists, have exponentially increased the past decade. SF, Chicago, and NYC have all pledged to create safer infrastructure. LA is far behind the rest of the world and has wasted half the land in the city to cars. These safety improvements are a drop in the bucket for what is actually needed.

Comments for Public Posting: Anaheim Street is one of the most dangerous roads in CD15 for pedestrians and cyclists, with 15 collisions (that we know of -- this number is famously underreported) in 2022 alone. Why in the world would we ever oppose traffic calming upgrades that make our streets safer? Invest in multimodal transportation instead so people in CD15 can stop breathing the most polluted air in the city.
