Comments for Public Posting: I have lived in LA for 13 years and have seen many good families lose their homes due to rent; the only reason why my family is managing is because we moved into an apartment with rent control when we arrived. If not for it, we would not have money to feed all of us, let alone get housing: and now my landlord is fighting to remove said rental control. America is facing a housing crisis that is extremely easily fixed, we have the tools, we just need to use them: so let's stop arguing if this good thing is good, and let's just ensure that we regulate housing market, as we regulate all other spheres, so that no elderly, adult, or a child goes without basic needs. Let's make sure that houses don't sit empty while families are starving on the streets.
