Comments for Public Posting: While I hear that the cost of living is improving, I'm not seeing it at the gas pumps or in the grocery store. Gasoline in California continues to cost over $5.00 per gallon. I used to fill my car up for $25. It now costs $75 or more to fill it up. Also, it always seemed to me that I could go to the grocery store and pick up basic items such as bread milk and cereal for under $2.00 each. Now, those items are running up to $4.00 and sometimes $5.00. I leave the grocery store with a bill of over $100 in two bags. I know that living in L.A. is expensive, but I've never felt it quite like I do now.
