Comments for Public Posting: 1984 in Van Nuys on Balboa park, The Tillman reclaimed water plant, surrounded by lakes and Japanese inspired designs, gardens opened, combining art and industrial necessities, an avant -garde concept at the time,, and the Japanese Garden was born cherished, visited, loved by thousands of local visitors from across the nation and around the world . Alas, due to an un renewed contract , the onset of the Pandemic, rising temperatures, inadequate gardeners, and the garden fell into a state of tragic disrepair. Time is marching on. Awarding "Parkwood landscape" the contract is crucial and demands urgency so the " Japanese Garden can be rehabilitated and recovered to its past glory so that the constituents and future visitors can admire its unique beauty.
