Comments for Public Posting: Although I live in Pasadena and was affected by the fires in my city, so have many residents in Los Angeles. At least 3-4 times a day, I am reading that animals, both dogs and cats are strays, most likely still from the fires, and do not have a home. It is beyond upsetting. We already have two rescue dogs, which we rescued from Los Angeles. Please, after all that those of us in Southern California have already been through, and it's not over, DO NOT cut the budget for Los Angeles Animal Services. We do not have enough staffing in animal services. We don't have enough shelters so Please do not cut the shelters. There are not enough Animal Control Officers to provide proper public safety. Mistakes have already been made with the fires. Do Not make another mistake with our beloved animals. Please do not cut any services or money to any department dealing with our animals. Thank you for your time.
