Comments for Public Posting: We were fortunate to tour the Hollyhock House a few months ago. We had wanted to go for a while, but our work schedules never cooperated with the house hours until this spring. This is a gem of architecture, and the docents are full of knowledge about the home and its history. One docent spoke to us for over 20 minutes about Aline Barnsdall and her life. Another happily explained the fireplace design. Please be sure to protect its funding, so others are able to tour it and learn a little about Los Angeles history.

Comments for Public Posting: I am writing to strongly urge the County to maintain and increase funding for LA Animal Services. Our city's animal shelters are already stretched thin, and any reduction in funding would severely impact the care, safety, and well-being of the thousands of animals who rely on these services. These shelters are essential for not only the humane treatment of animals but also for maintaining public health and safety in our neighborhoods. We must prioritize funding to ensure sufficient staff, resources, and services are available to prevent increased suffering and ensure the well-being of all animals under LA Animal Services' care. If you haven't paid attention to the social outcry across media channels — your constituents are outraged by the high rate of euthanasia, and the lack of proper regulations to stop backyard breeders. Any reduction will exacerbate the cruel scenario we are already facing. Please honor your voting constituents request to restore all funding (and increase it!) for LA Animal Services. Thank you.
