 Please accept this letter as public comment in support of the Fourth & Central project for Council File No. 26-0047-S2 / CPC-2021-4069.

Dear PLUM Committee Clerk, Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Brian Kohan, and I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project. I am a Los Angeles resident from Other Los Angeles neighborhood.

Downtown Los Angeles needs more homes, more neighbors, more public space, more active storefronts, and more investment in the walkable, transit-rich urban core of our city. Fourth & Central would help deliver exactly that: 1,589 new homes, affordable homes consistent with Measure JJJ, 2 acres of publicly accessible open space, new restaurant and retail space, thousands of union construction jobs, and major private investment in Downtown Los Angeles.

As a supporter of Downtown Los Angeles for All, I believe DTLA should be a place where people across incomes and backgrounds can live close to jobs, transit, culture, schools, services, and opportunity. Housing justice is not served by delay, scarcity, or leaving major infill sites underused. It is served by building more homes in places like Downtown, where density belongs and where new housing can support a more equitable, accessible, and vibrant Los Angeles.

The project team has also made meaningful revisions, including reducing building height, increasing affordable housing provisions, improving pedestrian connectivity to Little Tokyo, providing reduced-rent commercial space for legacy businesses, and removing haul routes through Little Tokyo. Those changes reflect a serious effort to respond to community concerns while still delivering the housing and amenities Los Angeles urgently needs.

Please support Fourth & Central and move this project forward.

Sincerely,

Brian Kohan

Re: Public Comment in Support of Fourth & Central — CF 26-0047-S2 / CPC-2021-4069

Dear PLUM Committee Clerk, Chair Harris-Dawson, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

Please accept this letter as public comment in strong support of the Fourth & Central project.

My name is Leslie Andrew Ridings, and I write as Chapter Chair of Downtown Los Angeles for All, a group of Downtown residents and pro-housing advocates committed to making DTLA a denser, more livable, more inclusive, and more opportunity-rich urban core. Our perspective is simple: Los Angeles should build more homes where infrastructure, transit, jobs, culture, and public life already come together. Fourth & Central is exactly the kind of project this city should be saying yes to.

Downtown Los Angeles is not a suburb resisting change, but the civic, cultural, economic, and transit heart of the region. It is also a real and rapidly growing residential community, home to roughly 90,000 Angelenos across incomes, backgrounds, and stages of life. Downtowners understand that density is not something to fear. It is how a great city creates opportunity, sustains small businesses, supports transit, fills sidewalks, improves safety through activity, and makes everyday urban life possible.

Fourth & Central is a model for precisely the kind of development we should be pursuing and incentivizing in DTLA. The project would deliver 1,589 new homes, including affordable homes consistent with Measure JJJ; approximately two acres of publicly accessible open space; new restaurant and retail space; office space; 439 new trees; pedestrian plazas and walkways; extensive public art; more than 10,000 union construction jobs; and approximately $2 billion in private investment. It would do so on an underused infill site within walking distance of mass transit and without residential displacement. That combination—housing, jobs, open space, transit access, and no displacement—is precisely what equitable urban development should look like in Los Angeles.

This project is not only about adding units; it is about building the kind of Downtown where more people can live close to opportunity. A Downtown with more homes means more customers for local businesses, more riders for transit, more support for neighborhood-serving retail, more activity on our sidewalks, and more people invested in the success of the urban core. It means converting underused land into a mixed-use district that can help stitch together Little Tokyo, the Arts District, Skid Row, and the Historic Core with new pedestrian connections and active public spaces.

DOWNTOWN LOS ANGELES FOR ALL

Housing justice is not served by scarcity. It is not served by leaving centrally located land underused while Angelenos are pushed farther from jobs, transit, culture, and community. It is served by building more homes in the places best equipped to absorb growth—especially Downtown Los Angeles, where density is not an imposition but the defining promise of the neighborhood.

The project team has also made meaningful revisions in response to community concerns, including reducing building heights, increasing affordable housing provisions, providing reduced-rent commercial space for legacy businesses, improving pedestrian connectivity to Little Tokyo, and removing haul routes through Little Tokyo. Those changes reflect a serious effort to listen while still preserving the housing, jobs, public space, and investment Los Angeles urgently needs.

Downtown's future should not be defined by vacant lots, darkened streets, and missed opportunities. It should be defined by homes, families, storefronts, sidewalks, transit, public space, and neighbors. Fourth & Central moves us toward that future. It aligns with the vision of a more complete, mixed-use, transit-oriented Downtown and with the broader goal of making Los Angeles a city where more people can live near opportunity.

I respectfully urge the PLUM Committee to support Fourth & Central and move this project forward.

Respectfully submitted,

 Dear Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Chris Tokita, and I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project. I am a fourth generation Japanese American who was born and raised in Los Angeles and grew up with Little Tokyo as a central part of my life and cultural community. I now live in Sawtelle Japantown, one of only two remaining Japantowns in Southern California and a community whose history was shaped by exactly the kind of exclusion that opponents of new housing invoke today.

I have written publicly about this in both the Los Angeles Daily News and the Japanese American newspaper Rafu Shimpo: when critics of new apartment buildings near Little Tokyo reach for the history of Japanese American internment to justify blocking housing, they have the lesson of that history exactly backwards. The answer to past exclusion, displacement, and destruction of community is to open doors wider for all, not to bolt them closed. Fourth & Central would bring 1,589 new homes, affordable housing consistent with Measure JJJ, two acres of publicly accessible open space, new restaurant and retail space, thousands of union construction jobs, and major private investment to a part of Downtown that urgently needs all of those things. Scarcity and delay do not protect vulnerable communities. Not at all. Saying no to this project just leads to pricing out the very communities we aim to protect.

Above all else, Downtown Los Angeles should be a place where people across incomes and backgrounds can live close to jobs, transit, culture, schools, services, and opportunity. The Cold Storage site is exactly the kind of underused, transit-rich infill location where density belongs. The project team has already worked in good-faith to incorporate community feedback. In light of those substantial revisions and the immense good that this project would bring to Little Tokyo, Downtown Los Angeles, and the greater city, we should support this project. Los Angeles has a deep housing shortage, and we cannot hope to ever solve it and make the city affordable again by saying no to projects like this where the good so clearly outweigh any minor bad, largely shouted by a small, unrepresentative group of voices.

Please support Fourth & Central and move this project forward.

Sincerely,
 Chris Tokita

Dear Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Jonathan Chue, and I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project. I am a Los Angeles resident from South Los Angeles.

Downtown Los Angeles needs more homes, more neighbors, more public space, more active storefronts, and more investment in the walkable, transit-rich urban core of our city. Fourth & Central would help deliver exactly that: 1,589 new homes, affordable homes consistent with Measure JJJ, 2 acres of publicly accessible open space, new restaurant and retail space, thousands of union construction jobs, and major private investment in Downtown Los Angeles.

As a supporter of Downtown Los Angeles for All, I believe DTLA should be a place where people across incomes and backgrounds can live close to jobs, transit, culture, schools, services, and opportunity. Housing justice is not served by delay, scarcity, or leaving major infill sites underused. It is served by building more homes in places like Downtown, where density belongs and where new housing can support a more equitable, accessible, and vibrant Los Angeles.

The project team has also made meaningful revisions, including reducing building height, increasing affordable housing provisions, improving pedestrian connectivity to Little Tokyo, providing reduced-rent commercial space for legacy businesses, and removing haul routes through Little Tokyo. Those changes reflect a serious effort to respond to community concerns while still delivering the housing and amenities Los Angeles urgently needs.

Please support Fourth & Central and move this project forward.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Chue

Dear Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Ricco Cruz, and I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project. I am a transit rider from Downtown Los Angeles.

Downtown Los Angeles needs more homes, more neighbors, more public space, more active storefronts, and more investment in the walkable, transit-rich urban core of our city. Fourth & Central would help deliver exactly that: 1,589 new homes, affordable homes consistent with Measure JJJ, 2 acres of publicly accessible open space, new restaurant and retail space, thousands of union construction jobs, and major private investment in Downtown Los Angeles.

I am genuinely interested in moving to DTLA myself and plan on moving there by the end of the year or early next year. I truly want DTLA to be lively, safe, and affordable.

As a supporter of Downtown Los Angeles for All, I believe DTLA should be a place where people across incomes and backgrounds can live close to jobs, transit, culture, schools, services, and opportunity. Housing justice is not served by delay, scarcity, or leaving major infill sites underused. Dear Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Steven Price, and I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project. I am a Los Angeles resident from Westside.

Downtown Los Angeles needs more homes, more neighbors, more public space, more active storefronts, and more investment in the walkable, transit-rich urban core of our city. Fourth & Central would help deliver exactly that: 1,589 new homes, affordable homes consistent with Measure JJJ, 2 acres of publicly accessible open space, new restaurant and retail space, thousands of union construction jobs, and major private investment in Downtown Los Angeles.

We need more homes. We need more accessible transportation. We need more walkability. Full stop. Period. This project is a very good start in those directions.

As a supporter of Downtown Los Angeles for All, I believe DTLA should be a place where people across incomes and backgrounds can live close to jobs, transit, culture, schools, services, and opportunity. Dear Chair Blumenfield, Councilmember Jurado, and Honorable Members of the PLUM Committee:

My name is Michael Karric and I work in Little Tokyo and am a supporter of Downtown Los Angeles for All. I am writing in strong support of the Fourth & Central project.

This development will provide 1,589 new homes (including Measure JJJ-compliant affordable housing), two acres of public open space, retail opportunities, and thousands of union jobs. By transforming an underused infill site into a high-density, transit-rich hub, this project promotes housing justice and a more equitable, vibrant city. Furthermore, the project team has meaningfully addressed community concerns by reducing building heights, increasing affordable units, improving connectivity to Little Tokyo, and protecting legacy businesses.

Please support Fourth & Central and move this project forward.

Sincerely,
 Michael Karric
