Comments for Public Posting: I am commenting on the property at Lomita Blvd. and Vermont Ave in Harbor City California, the homeless around the area have taken over this property on more than one occasion breaking into the fenced property and building that is located on this location. they have fires there every day and night to cook and keep warm. the fire department has come out more times than I can count. The trash and debris the homeless leave is unsanitary and unsafe, that also promotes rats' mice and other wildlife to the area, making it a health hazard for any kids walking by to and from school. Something more permeant needs to be done to keep the homeless from being in and around this area including the street right next to this property which id McCoy Ave. an area that has been one of the biggest homeless encampments in the City for long time, his has been cleaned up for a while now which has been not having this eyesore like it was and the health hazards that come with it.
