

How to Fix Measure ULA

100 messages

Leslie Alabe <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 3:07 PM

Reply-To: leslie.alabe730@gmail.com

To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Leslie Alabe
leslie.alabe730@gmail.com

Torrance, California 90502

Kevin Scott <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: kevin.robert.scott@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 3:16 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kevin Scott
kevin.robert.scott@gmail.com
234 S Ave 56
Los Angeles, California 90042

josh cretella <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: jctrl@protonmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 3:53 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

josh cretella
jcrll@protonmail.com
939 S Serrano Ave Apt 706
Los Angeles, California 90006-6320

Deborah Bradley <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: dmagg275@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:00 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Deborah Bradley
dmagg275@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90018

Eithan Itaev <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: ieithan1101@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:12 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Eithan Itaev
ieithan1101@gmail.com
2410 University Drive
Van Nuys, California 91401

Jack kirkpatrick <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: Jackckirkpatrick@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:14 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Jack kirkpatrick

Jackckirkpatrick@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90066

Murray McQueen <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: murraymcqueen@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:36 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Murray McQueen

murraymcqueen@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90064

Isaac Resnikoff <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: isaacresnikoff@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:37 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Isaac Resnikoff
isaacresnikoff@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90042

Charles Iantorno <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: charlieiantorno@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:40 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to repeal Measure ULA.

ULA's problems are well documented. The law was sold as a mansion tax, but that was a lie. ULA directly discourages the construction of new apartment buildings, which means less affordable housing options overall. The "impact" of ULA is less housing for more cost. The other approach, facilitating private apartment construction, is clearly better for all because supply and demand works. Public housing efforts, on the other hand, suffer from dramatic cost overruns, delays, habitability problems, and a lack of accountability (see IG reports) if they ever get built.

The good news is these flaws to Angeleno housing policy are fixable. Reforms should be focused on getting the government out of the way and letting private builders and land owners build apartment buildings. Anything else will not make a dent in LA's housing crisis. Ignore the Nimbys who are losing popularity everyday. Just let people build.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering a repeal of Measure ULA. The original promise of ULA is to help fix the housing crisis, not make it worse, so a full repeal is actually more efficient and productive!

Thank you for your time and service to fixing the sordid, regrettable, and racist history of exclusionary zoning.

Charles Iantorno
charlieiantorno@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90028

Eddie Isaacs <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: isaacs_e@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:42 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Eddie Isaacs

isaacs_e@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90012

ellen.jannol@gmail.com <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: Ellen.jannol@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 4:57 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

ellen.jannol@gmail.com

,

Lakhysa Ross <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: kphllipr@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:21 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Lakhysa Ross
kphllipr@yahoo.com

Riverside, California 92509

Michael Fraser <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: michael.allan.Fraser@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:24 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Michael Fraser
michael.allan.fraser@gmail.com
325 W 8TH
LOS ANGELES, California 90014

Cipra Nemeth <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: cipran@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:35 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Cipra Nemeth

cipran@gmail.com

6600 Lindenhurst Ave

Los Angeles, California 90048

JoAnn Liddell <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: Chocolateneanea@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:40 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

JoAnn Liddell
Chocolateneanea@yahoo.com

Pacoima, California 91331

auguste.miller@yahoo.com <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: auguste.miller@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:41 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

auguste.miller@yahoo.com

,

Kelly vanOteghem <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: kellyvano@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:48 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

Los Angeles cannot afford to keep holding itself back. If we want to remain a dynamic, globally competitive city that truly provides for everyone who lives here and everyone who will in the future, we need private development to play its essential role in building the housing and economic vitality we need.

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kelly vanOteghem
kellyvano@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90065

Jeremy Bamberger <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: jermberg@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:55 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property

transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Jeremy Bamberger
jermberg@gmail.com

Santa Monica, California 90405

Megan McNamara <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: dmorrisoniane@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 5:57 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Megan McNamara
dmorrisoniane@gmail.com
10819 Camarillo Street
Los Angeles, California 91602

Kevin Colindres <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: kevincolindres@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 6:24 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kevin Colindres
kevincolindres@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90032

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Deborah Jones
ilove1mann@aol.com

San Pedro, California 90732

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Anthony Ball
aball0032@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90065

Anthony Ball <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: aball0032@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 6:58 PM

[Quoted text hidden]

Derrick Blassingame <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: derrickblassingame@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 7:08 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Derrick Blassingame
derrickblassingame@gmail.com

Kadie Presley Wilson <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: kadiepresley@hotmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 7:37 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kadie Presley Wilson
kadiepresley@hotmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90046

Katrina Smith <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: katrinasharonsmith@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 7:50 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Katrina Smith

katrinasharonsmith@gmail.com

South Gate, California 90280

Dorothy Fortenberry <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>

Reply-To: dfortenberry@gmail.com

To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 7:56 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Dorothy Fortenberry
dfortenberry@gmail.com
507 N Frederic St
Burbank, California 91505

Anna Davis <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: akampling@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 8:13 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Anna Davis
akampling@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90024

STEPHEN wilson <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: drawings@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 8:14 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

STEPHEN wilson
drawrings@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90046

Sophia Gonzales <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: sljuarez22@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 8:22 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Sophia Gonzales
sljuarez22@gmail.com

Sylmar, California 91342

Carey Bennett <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: careyjbennett@proton.me
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 9:02 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Carey Bennett
careyjbennett@proton.me

Los Angeles, California 90027

Ann Dorsey <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: aedorsey@hotmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 9:04 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Ann Dorsey
aedorsey@hotmail.com
18042 Schoenborn St
Los Angeles, California 91325

Morris Mills <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: morrismillsmusic@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 10:35 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Morris Mills

morrismillsmusic@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90005

Michael Keshish <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: michael.keshish@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Wed, May 27, 2026 at 10:41 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

No for Bass.

Michael Keshish
michael.keshish@gmail.com
10715 Whitegate Ave
Sunland, California 91040

Palmira Hernandez <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: pammyh9736@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 1:00 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Palmira Hernandez
pammyh9736@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90022

Michael Rivera <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: michaelr1482@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 2:33 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property

transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Michael Rivera
michaelr1482@gmail.com

Van Nuys, California 91411

Nora Flores <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: noisynoranora@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 2:55 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Nora Flores
noisynoranora@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90032

Natasha Prather <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: tashamae2017@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 6:05 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Natasha Prather
tashamae2017@gmail.com

Tujunga, California 91042

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Danielle Montezinos
kyttiegirl@yahoo.com

Encino, California 91316

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Denand Jordan
Denandjordan38@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90003

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Theodoric Manley
hoopinstitute@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90014

Jose Fernando Martinez <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: jfmart65@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 7:28 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Jose Fernando Martinez
jfmart65@gmail.com

Van Nuys, California 91405

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Phillip Musikanth
pamusikanth@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90046

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Darryl Harris
dnotes777@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90057

Debra Robins <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: robinsdebraann50@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 9:42 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Debra Robins
robinsdebraann50@gmail.com

Panorama City, California 91402

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kathleen Steckel
Celticcutie77@gmail.com

North Hollywood, California 91606

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Christie Deddens
cultureplusgirl@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90035

Teresa Juarez <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: juarezz5654@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 11:35 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Teresa Juarez
juarezz5654@gmail.com

Huntington Park, California 90255

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Patricia Holguin
3perrosmeandal97@gmail.com

Compton, California 90220

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Hamid Saei
saeihami50@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90038

Justine Yazzie <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: tinayazzie09@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 1:23 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Justine Yazzie
tinayazzie09@gmail.com

Saint George, Utah 84790

Reply-To: ctresp@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I'll be blunt: Measure ULA is broken, and you know it.

I've spent my career in Los Angeles real estate. I'm also raising my kids here — because I believe in this city. But what I'm watching happen to our market is infuriating, and the inaction from City Hall is making it worse.

Let me tell you what I'm seeing on the ground. The real estate investors I work with — public and private, local and regional — are veering away from the City of LA entirely. Not slowing down. Leaving. They're taking their capital, their projects, and the housing they would have built and moving it to jurisdictions that actually want investment. That's not a forecast. That's happening right now, deal by deal.

The research backs up what I'm living every day. ULA taxes brand-new apartment buildings the exact same way it taxes decades-old investment properties. That's not policy — that's a penalty on the very construction this city is begging for. And the results speak for themselves: high-value transactions have cratered by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county. Investment is fleeing city limits. Our property tax base is shrinking. This was supposed to help Los Angeles — instead it's actively hurting us.

Fix it. The Mend it, Don't End it Coalition has laid out exactly how:

1. 15-Year Exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years post-Certificate of Occupancy. We need to make building here worth it again.
2. Rate Cap After Year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties. Restore liquidity. Rebuild the tax base.
3. Wildfire Relief — The families who lost everything in the 2025 fires deserve a time-limited exemption. Full stop.
4. Streamline Financing — The current subordination and foreclosure rules are blocking affordable housing deals from getting financed. That's the opposite of the program's intent.
5. Real Accountability — Set clear performance targets, require transparent reporting, and enforce conflict-of-interest rules. The public deserves to know if this money is actually working.
6. Issue Bonds Now — Don't trickle out capital over years. Leverage future ULA revenues to fund housing construction today, when we need it.

I'm raising my family in this city because I chose to believe in its future. But that future depends on leaders who are willing to make hard, smart decisions — not protect a flawed measure out of political convenience. If these reforms aren't enacted, abolishing ULA entirely becomes the only responsible path forward — because a broken program that drives away investment and strangles construction is worse than no program at all.

This is your moment to lead. Take it.

Christopher Tresp
ctresp@gmail.com

Sherman Oaks, California 91403

Michael Wexler <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: michael000@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 3:13 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

While a complete retroactive repeal of ULA would be ideal to restore the city's credibility, help with other steps to stop the exodus, and reinvigorate the city, the ship may have sailed on this option. ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Michael Wexler
michael000@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90066

Stephen Son <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: sonicw83@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 3:23 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Stephen Son
sonicw83@gmail.com
2959 Hillcrest Dr
Los Angeles, California 90016

Neville Foster <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: ngcfoster@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 3:47 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Neville Foster

ngcfoster@gmail.com

Pico Rivera, California 90660

Suzanne Fava <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: taz1759@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 4:44 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Suzanne Fava

Suzanne Fava

taz1759@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90036

Byron Sheldon <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: byronsheldon37@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 5:06 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Byron Sheldon

byronsheldon37@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90057

Liam Horgan <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: lhorgan026@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 6:17 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Liam Horgan
lhorgan026@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90034

Zachary Myers <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: zachm92123@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 6:19 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.

2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.

3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.

4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.

5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.

6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Zachary Myers
zachm92123@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90034

Robert Holeman II <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: holemanr2@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 6:55 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Robert Holeman II
holemanr2@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90019

Beverly Monroe <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: beverlymonroe09@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 9:05 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Beverly Monroe
beverlymonroe09@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90017

Martha Gutierrez <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: patriciagutierrez021767@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 9:17 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property

transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Martha Gutierrez
patriciagutierrez021767@gmail.com

Compton, California 90221

Lilian Martinez <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: lilianyaniramartinezreyes9078@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 11:01 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Lilian Martinez

lilianyaniramartinezreyes9078@gmail.com

North Hollywood, California 91605

digitaldevah@gmail.com <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: digitaldevah@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Thu, May 28, 2026 at 11:53 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

digitaldevah@gmail.com

,

Derek VanOteghem <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: ottergums@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Fri, May 29, 2026 at 12:00 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Derek VanOteghem
ottergums@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90065

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Jacqueline Hall
sunny.daze.suck@gmail.com

Lancaster, California 93535

Reply-To: janyonan@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Jan Yonan

janyonan@gmail.com

756 South Broadway , Unit 713

Los Angeles, California 90014

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kimberly Kekahuna
dukiek31@gmail.com

Waianae, Hawaii 96792

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Michelle Thomas
observationbringswisdom@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90016

Crystal Mansker <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: cdmansker@aol.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Fri, May 29, 2026 at 4:18 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Crystal Mansker
cdmansker@aol.com

Granada Hills, California 91344

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Alex Lai
alai002@gmail.com

, 91754

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Xochil Robles
japonesa.xg13@gmail.com

Gardena, California 90247

Karen Slider <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: sliderkaren@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Fri, May 29, 2026 at 9:00 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Karen Slider
sliderkaren@yahoo.com

Sylmar, California 91342

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Ted Otis oldbroadway@mac.com

Los Angeles, California 90036

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

msweier1991@gmail.com

,

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Michael Wedlow
wedlowmichael3@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90047

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

the.blibit@gmail.com

Stephen Hubbard <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: sterrsh1967@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Fri, May 29, 2026 at 4:03 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Stephen Hubbard
sterrsh1967@gmail.com

Inglewood, California 90305

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

MICHAEL MCCLURE
msmcclure@outlook.com

Tucson, Arizona 85701

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

SHAVON Hawkins
ladyhawkins46@gmail.com

Riverside, California 92503

Chris Olmstead <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: olmstead.chris@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Fri, May 29, 2026 at 7:40 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Chris Olmstead
olmstead.chris@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90066

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Timothy Lewis
timothylewis8585@gmail.com

San Jacinto, California 92583

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Kevin Adams
kevonadams1st@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90003

Claudia Rose <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: claudiarose2010@aol.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 1:15 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Claudia Rose
claudiarose2010@aol.com

Burbank, California 91506

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Lourdes Ornelas
lourdeso5053@gmail.com

Paramount, California 90723

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Eilisha Bacon
eilishabacon2015@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90013

Angelique Reinicke <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: angeliquerr@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 8:27 AM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Angelique Reinicke
angeliquerr@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90023

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

ellen Jannol
ellen.jannol@gmail.com

Van Nuys, California 91401

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

carlos serrano
serranorosac67@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90006

Brenda Smith <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: joycebj10@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 12:17 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Brenda Smith
joycebj10@gmail.com

North Hollywood, California 91605

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Verenice Balderas
vernbortega1976@gmail.com

San Fernando, California 91340

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Geralyn McGah-Miller
mcgahmiller@gmail.com

Studio City, California 91604

Katherine Miller <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: ubkittykate@yahoo.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 2:50 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Katherine Miller
ubkittykate@yahoo.com

Van Nuys, California 91406

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Shannun Broussard
broussardshannun@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90061

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

William Ruffin Settle settlewilliamruffin@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90001

tristTristan williaWilliams <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: tombeans888@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 4:02 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

tristTristan williaWilliams tombeans888@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90011

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Bryan Small
bryansmall66@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90019

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

kajoana Wolterding
kajoanaw@gmail.com

Los Angeles, California 90003

Luz Maldonado <noreply@adv.actionnetwork.org>
Reply-To: luzm02126@gmail.com
To: clerk.CPS@lacity.org

Sat, May 30, 2026 at 6:33 PM

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Luz Maldonado
luzm02126@gmail.com

Hermosa Beach, California 90254

Los Angeles City Clerk,

I am writing to urge you to advance well-designed reforms to Measure ULA that fix its obvious flaws while preserving revenues for affordable housing and tenant protections.

ULA's problems are well documented by independent academic research. It taxes newly-built apartment buildings the same as decades-old investment properties, discouraging the construction of homes LA desperately needs. And it has cratered high-value property transactions — by roughly 50% compared to the rest of the county — pushing investment outside the city limits and significantly shrinking the city's property tax base.

The good news is these flaws are fixable. Reforms should include the six changes advanced by the Mend it, Don't End it Coalition:

1. 15-year exemption — Exempt newly built multifamily and commercial properties from the tax for 15 years following Certificate of Occupancy to get residential homebuilding and commercial investment back on track.
2. Rate cap after year 15 — Cap ULA at 1–2% on non-single-family properties to restore transaction liquidity and the city's property tax base.
3. Wildfire relief — Provide a time-limited exemption for 2025 wildfire survivors and future disaster victims.
4. Streamline financing — Remove subordination and foreclosure rules that block affordable housing project financing.
5. Performance and governance — Establish clear targets, transparent reporting, and conflict-of-interest rules so the public can hold the program accountable.
6. Issue bonds to build faster — Leverage future ULA revenues to put capital for housing construction to work now rather than incrementally over years.

This moment is an opportunity to exercise true courage and leadership by delivering on Measure ULA's original promise for a more affordable LA. I urge you to take it.

Thank you for your time and service to our city.

Luis Diaz
licasincalif@yahoo.com

Los Angeles, California 90039