Comments for Public Posting: No LA city officials would be gutsy enough to speak for the landlords who worked hard all their lives to save and invest in little rental properties for retirement. Every time a bill is raised to add additional burden to home owners or landlords, the government officials who were also landlords recuse themselves from voting; who will then stand up to represent the landlords who are minorities of the city? This street lighting initiative is another of these ridiculous proposals. Are the street lighting only used by homeowners and landlords? Why should landlords or homeowners bear the burden that should be paid for by all who lives and accesses the city streets? I will be ok if the city raises sales taxes rather than targeting people owning properties. Please vote no on this measure!!
