Comments for Public Posting: I support the committee's decision to send the 300-vehicle proposal back for more analysis. The meeting spent far too long debating why one option cost about $29 million and another about $31 million. The committee report already says the CAO and CLA had not completed the financial analysis. So the simple answer was to finish the analysis, compare the real costs, and come back. Committee should not have to figure out unfinished staff work during the meeting. This is the kind of scrutiny the Convention Center project should have received much earlier before the City was already committed and backed into a corner.
